Actually, bag/box nasties and MREs aren't too bad. But nonetheless, chow is important to recruits. It's the main source of motivation for some recruits, and they repeat the mantra "Day to day, chow to chow" to get through boot camp.

Drinking (or "pounding") water... the group drinking sessions were pretty torturous, esp. if you just finished drinking a canteen of water on your own. I think my bladder doubled in size by the time I got out of boot camp.

Also, the Drill Instructors were geniuses at nicknaming recruits. I envy their skills. :)
